Dear Dr. Summerson;

1 I am writing in regards to the poorly thought out plan to transport deadly irradiated fuel rods across our state and country.

If this waste from the nuclear power plants is so very dangerous for thousands of years why risk exposing so many people to a possible accident on our highways and railroads?

To me it would make much more sense to bury and monitor the waste at the site at which it was generated. Especially since the communities where it is being produced agreed to have the poison by-product generated there.

Sincerely
Pamela H Todorovich
